Building Rider ownership of their vehicle

With schools moving away from the complete design and construction of vehicles, Teams have been using new ways of developing student involvement. A successful strategy is using the Teams' Versions of the three Scrutineering Check Lists in training exercises. As riders go through the lists, they learn how their vehicle works and appreciate why the rules are in place.

Familiarisation with their vehicle develops student responsibility in caring for its operation, using their seatbelt properly and not just leaving it all up to the Team Manager. Riders have an important part to play in their own safety.
